

“Argentina: Hong Kong’s Antipode?”

by

Mr. Ricardo Forrester
Consul-General of the Argentine Republic in Hong Kong

The distance between Argentina and the Special Administrative Region of Hong Kong has for many years been considered by many residents in both territories to be a significant deterrent to any close relationship between them.

This presentation, while contributing to present the basics characteristics of Argentina for the Baptist University students, will try to dispel this preconception by showcasing the different cultural, commercial and historical relationships between these parties.

It will also delve, although marginally, with the possibility that the original inhabitants of America actually came from Asia as similarities in religion, physiognomy and art seem to demonstrate.
